Assessing your Leadership Mode

Your Mode of Leadership

Your leadership mode is the manner and approach with which you provide direction, implement plans, and motivate people. There are three overall modes of leadership.

This questionnaire contains statements about beliefs around modes of leadership and will help assess what leadership mode you normally use.

Next to each statement, choose the number that represents how strongly you feel about the statement by using the following scoring system:

- Five - Almost always true
- Four - Frequently true
- Three - Occasionally true
- Two - Seldom true
- One - Almost never true

Be honest about your choices as there are no right or wrong answers.

Assessing your Leadership Mode

- 1 I always retain the final decision making authority within my department or team.
- 2 I always try to include one or more employees in determining what to do and how to do it. However, I maintain the final decision making authority.
- 3 I and my employees always vote whenever a major decision has to be made.
- 4 I do not consider suggestions made by my employees as I do not have the time for them.
- 5 I ask for employee ideas and input on upcoming plans and projects.
- 6 For a major decision to pass in my department, it must have the approval of each individual or the majority.
- 7 I tell my employees what has to be done and how to do it.
- 8 When things go wrong and I need to create a strategy to keep a project or process running on schedule, I call a meeting to get my employees' advice.
- 9 To get information out, I send it by email, memos, or voice mail; very rarely is a meeting called. My employees are then expected to act upon the information.
- 10 When someone makes a mistake, I tell them not to ever do that again and make a note of it.

Assessing your Leadership Mode

- 11 I want to create an environment where the employees take ownership of the project. I allow them to participate in the decision making process.
- 12 I allow my employees to determine what needs to be done and how to do it.
- 13 New employees are not allowed to make any decisions unless it is approved by me first.
- 14 I ask employees for their vision of where they see their jobs going and then use their vision where appropriate.
- 15 My employees know more about their jobs than me, so I allow them to carry out the decisions to do their job.
- 16 When something goes wrong, I tell my employees that a procedure is not working correctly and I establish a new one.
- 17 I allow my employees to set priorities with my guidance.
- 18 I delegate tasks in order to implement a new procedure or process.
- 19 I closely monitor my employees to ensure they are performing correctly.
- 20 When there are differences in role expectations, I work with them to resolve the differences.

Assessing your Leadership Mode

Interpreting your Scores

The lowest score possible for any mode is 10 while the highest score possible for any mode is 50.

The highest of the three scores indicates which mode of leadership you most frequently use.

Scores over 40 are a very strong indicator of a preference for this mode(s).

Scores between 25 and 40 are an indicator of the mode(s) that you are regularly using.

Scores lower than 25 are an indicator of the mode(s) that you use less often.

A good leader chooses the mode they operate in depending upon context and upon what forces are involved between the followers and the leader.

Authoritarian Mode

This mode is being used when the leader tells their employees what they want done and how they want it done, without getting the advice of their followers. This mode is appropriate when you have all the information to solve the problem, you are short on time, and your employees are well motivated.

Assessing your Leadership Mode

Participative Mode

The participative mode involves the leader including one or more employees within the decision making process (determining what to do and how to do it). However, the leader maintains the final authority in making decisions. Using this mode is not a sign of weakness; rather it is a sign of strength that employees will respect.

Enabling Mode

In this mode, the leader allows the employees to make the decision for themselves or the team. However, the leader is still responsible for the overall decisions that are made. This mode is best used when employees have relevant experience, are able to analyse the situation and determine what needs to be done and how to do it. As a leader, you cannot do everything! You must set priorities and delegate certain tasks.

A leader who has a new team or temporary work-force would probably need to operate with the authoritarian mode most of the time. Similarly, a leader who has an established team of professionals would probably operate with the participative mode. Leaders, who want their employees to grow and contribute more, find the enabling mode of leadership more useful in this context. As employees develop into their jobs they are gradually given more autonomy within their jobs and so the most effective leadership mode tends to be enabling.

Experienced leaders are able to adapt their mode, using all three modes, according to the context and the need. Poor leaders tend to be less flexible.

Assessing your Leadership Mode

This survey cannot determine when and where you are using each mode, it only provides an indication of frequency of use; it would be worth considering whether you are using each mode in the most appropriate manner.

Although good leaders use all three modes, one or two of them usually dominates. Your usage of each mode may be influenced by your current habits and comfort level with each of the modes.

Scores lower than 25

A low authoritarian mode score may indicate a low level of need for this mode within your current situation. It may also indicate a discomfort where assertion and direction is called for.

With a low participative score, you may be overlooking areas where collaboration and team working is called for.

A low enabling mode score may indicate a difficulty relinquishing control and a need to micromanage individuals. This has the potential to restrict the performance and capabilities of individuals with skills and experience.

Scores between 25 and 40

Scores at this level indicate that you are frequently using this mode / modes. It is important to check that each mode is matching the people and the context for each situation.

Assessing your Leadership Mode

Scores over 40

Scores at this level indicate a high usage of the mode(s). These may be driven by habits created from recent situations and it is important to review the context of each situation so that your mode is consciously chosen to give the maximum chance of success.

You are the person best placed to determine the context and it is essential that you are aware of the importance of this.

Further interpretations

If your highest score is six or more points above your second score, this is interpreted that your highest score indicates the dominant mode that you are currently using.

Scores with a difference of five or less, indicate a level of interchangeability therefore none of these modes would dominate.

A large difference between your lowest score and the other scores (between 15 and 20 points) indicates a mode that you may not be using. You may not have the opportunity to use this mode, you may have less experience in using this mode or you may find it difficult to adapt to this mode due to your personality. Some thought around these points may help you in your development as a leader.
